"WHEN EARTH WAS YOUNG."

In days of old, when earth was young,
When heroes lived and poets sung,
A spirit dwelt in every tree,
And voices of deep mystery
Spoke in the murmur of the sea,
In days of old, when earth was young.

But now the earth is growing old,
The lute is mute, and faith is cold;
The spirit of the tree is fled,
And voices, once to music wed,
Are hushed, for fancy's self is dead,
Now that the earth has grown so old.

The child's fresh faith pays homage free
In all to some divinity;
But shrines are cold, and altars bare,
When hearts are warped with age and care,
And doubting spirits will not dare
To trust in ought they cannot see.

IN TWOS.

Somewhere in the world there lide
Garden gates that no one sees
Save they come in happy twos—
Not in ones, nor yet in threes.

But from every maiden's door
Leads a pathway straight and true,
Maps and surveys know it not:
He who finds, finds room for two.

Then they see the garden gates!
Never skies so blue as theirs,
Never flowers so many sweet
As for those who come in pairs.

Round and round the alleys wind,
Now a cradle bars their way,
Now a little mound, behind—
So the two go through the day.

When no noise in all the lanes
But has heard a sorg or sigh,
Lo! another garden gate
Opens as the two go by!

In they wander, know ing not;
"Five-and-twenty" fills the air
With a silvery echo low,
All about the startled pair.

Happier yet these garden walks;
Closer, heart to heart they lean;
Still, softer falls the light;
Few the twos, and far between.

Till, at last, as on they pass
Down the paths so well they know,
Once again at hidden gates
Stand the two; they enter slow.

Golden gates of fifty years,
May our two your locket press!
Garden of the Sunset Land
Hold their dearest happiness!

Then a quiet walk again;
Then a whisper in the wall;
Then one stepping on alone—
Then two at the Heart of All!

Select Story.

THE BARONESS' JEWEL BOX.

A STORY FROM THE GERMAN

The Baroness Rukavina Eltz was the most splendid and dashing personage in the Er Valley. Her castle near Somlyo was the finest specimen of a great residence in all that shadow of the Er Mellek, and she, a Roumanian by birth and a Hungarian by marriage, seemed to unite all the brilliant characteristics of both these picturesque races.

She was a widow to begin with, and since the animal man has speculated upon the varieties of the angel woman, a widow has been pronounced the most amiable variety of the species. She was very beautiful, tall, svelte, blue eyed, black-haired, piquant, red and white, with the most scornful little mouth and the most delicate profile; her hand and foot were models, although the latter was frequently stamped when she was not pleased. She was—in the third and last place, as preachers say—very rich, and had fallen heiress to two collections of jewels which were almost fabulously valuable. A brilliant creature, the Baroness. She owned villages and vineyards, and made a large income every year from her sale of Ruster, a grand wine of a pale golden hue, which had as full and peculiar a flavor as she had herself. The Baroness sent her wine to Vienna, where it was considered almost equal to Tokay. Of course, she had suitors, the beautiful, sharp Baroness. They came from Transylvania and Russia, from Roumania and all Hungary, from Austria and all the German Principalities; and for the unlucky wretches about Pus Poki and the Behar Settlement, and the country gentleman of Erdiosegh, they knelt and worshipped in vain as she dashed past them on her fleet thoroughbred, for she was Diana as a huntress and the queen of the Amazons also. Her black horse Tetenyer was said to emit fire from his nostrils when he stopped to breathe.

This grand lady was afraid of nobody, loved nobody, had no friends, save the nuns at the foot of the Rez Gebirge and one old priest who seemed to be deeply in her confidence. Every year she made a grand visit somewhere—Vienna, Paris, Rome, London or St. Petersburg. She spent money like water, made everybody talk, wonder and admire, and where her splendid jewels were the envy of all the Court ladies.

Yes, she was afraid of one man, and that was her steward, Neusiedler, he who for years had managed her vast estates, her vineyards and her wheatfields, her fields and fisheries.

Neusiedler was a crouching, cross-eyed, mean-looking German Jew, married to a bold, black eyed, large-nosed woman, who was twice his size, and who lived in the village, near the castle, and who spent her time envying and hating the Baroness. Madame Pasteur, the French companion, and Matilde, the French maid, who never left the Baroness, thought that Neusiedler, and his wife had the evil eye and that they would some day wilt the Baroness. But Rukavina-Eltz laughed at this fear, and kept on her course exultant. Still when the yearly pay day came round, and she had to look over accounts with Neusiedler, she did show what she had never shown before—fear.

Among her jewels was a splendid rope of pearl-colored pearls, the rarest thing in the whole world, neither black nor white, but pearl color, with three great emerald pendants, each as large as a small pear. The Emperor always noticed this jewel with a smile and a compliment when the Baroness Rukavina-Eltz went to a court ball at Vienna. He told her that the Empress had nothing half as handsome, and it is to be feared that the Emperor spoke also of the white, firm neck on which the necklace rested, for Rukavina-Eltz was apt to blush and look magnificently well at such moments. Then she had great chains of sapphires as blue as her eyes and some big rubies which the baron had given her (the old Baron, twice her age, who went down into Roumania for her when she was 15,) and she had diamonds, of course—every rich lady has diamonds—and a great box full of engraved amethysts and antique gems, some that Cardinal Antonelli gave her in Rome, for he, too, had admired the wild Baroness.

Indeed, if the Baroness Rukavina Eltz had ever written her memoirs, what a story she could have told! But the end of every woman's history is that she finally falls in love, and such was the beginning of the end of the story of Rukavina-Eltz. She went to England one summer, and there was a young Lord Ronald Somerset, or a Lord George Levenson Montague, or a young Lord Howard Plantagenet (they mix them up so, these English words, they are not half so individual as our Hungarian names,) who could ride better than she could. This was a terrible blow to the Baroness and she wished herself dead.

But when at dinner the soft-voiced, handsome, tall young Englishman, Sir Lyster Howard Lyster (that was his name after all) sat next to her and talked so well and was so complimentary to her seat, cross country, and noticed the pearl-colored pearls, and the emeralds, with his lips, and the neck underneath with his eyes, Rukavina-Eltz forgave him, and he began to talk of her home near Somlyo, and it ended in a large English party coming to the Er Valley, under the shadow of the Er Mellek, for a long summer visit. And how they raved about everything—the wine, the horses, the scenery, the wild, barbaric splendor of the Baroness' housekeeping, and how they all hated Neusiedler and his big, black-browed wife, who were invited up to the balls.

There was an English lady, one with very long teeth, and very long nose, and very high eyebrows, and they called her Lady Louisa. She was very grand and lofty, and Madame Pasteur heard her say one day—

"Do you know, dear Baroness, I think you are so very careless—don't you know?—about those beautiful jewels of yours—do you know?"

"But who could steal them?" said the Baroness, laughing. "There are none like them in all Hungary, and no one would dare to wear them, they are so rare!"

"Ah! but some of these wild people of yours! they might swallow your emeralds, those fierce Croats, the Roumanians; and then you keep them in such open closets and boxes." Madame Pasteur nodded her meek head, too. She had trembled for the jewels always.

But the Baroness and Sir Lyster began to think of other things and jewels; there were moonlight rides and walks, and there were long talks and many reveries. Lady Louisa went home, they all went, but Sir Lyster came back.

And then, one evening, Madame Pasteur said afterwards that she saw Neusiedler come in and bully the Baroness, and she heard him hiss out the words—

"Remember if you marry, you lose all. Remember the Baron's will!"

And Rukavina-Eltz turned pale and said, "Bully, traitor, fiend," between her shut teeth. She went off to Paris on one of her long visits, and Neusiedler squeezed the tenants and made every one miserable. The castle was shut up and black Tetenyer grew thin in his stalls.

When she came back she looked older and more sedate. She went often to see the nuns at the foot of Rez Gebirge. She saw the priest also very often, and Madame Pasteur thought she was growing devote. But she dressed in her usual dashing colors (for she was a very Roumanian at heart,) and she wore one wore one of those scarlet quilted petticoats that the English ladies wore so much; and very pretty it looked, with her dark habit and her dark dresses looped up over it. This, with a scarlet feather in her hat, looked as if the Baroness was thinking of England.

It was a miserable day, that, when Madame Pasteur and Matilda came screaming down the long corridor.

"The jewels are gone! gone! gone!"

The Baroness had the great bell of the castle rung, and Neusiedler was sent for at once. She was very pale for she loved those pearls and emeralds.

Neusiedler was composed, every look was made to say, "I told you so;" he had always warned her about the jewels.

"What can be done?" asked the Baroness.

"Search, whip, imprison all who attempt to leave the province," said Neusiedler, calmly.

"Except women—I will have no women whipped," said the Baroness.

"I am glad to hear that," said Neusiedler, laughing his malicious laugh, "for Madame Neusiedler goes to Vienna tomorrow."

"Ah!" said the Baroness, "you know I could not mean, at any rate, that Madame Neusiedler should be disturbed; send her in my little carriage with the three ponies to Erdiosegh."

"Your Excellency is very condescending," said Neusiedler, bowing to the ground.

The local police sought everywhere for the lost jewels, but no traces of them could be found. The Baroness sat in a sort of stupor and looked out of the window.

"I will go to England," said she hastily one day. "Neusiedler, some money, and arrange for me to be gone three months."

"It is well, madame," said the steward.

It was a very roundabout route that the Baroness took for England. When Matilda and Madame Pasteur reached the station at Erdiosegh they were astonished to see the Baroness dash into the ticket-office and buy tickets for Vienna, and when they arrived, all of them, at her fine hotel at Vienna, who should step out to meet them but Sir Lyster Howard Lyster.

Nothing but the well-known eccentricity of the Baroness apologized to Madame Pasteur for what followed. She commanded two dresses to be made, and that Madame Pasteur should go with her to a Jewish masked ball at the Opera House in Vienna.

"Sir Lyster Howard Lyster will go with us!" said she, as a shade passed over the pale face of her companion.

Oh! that the lady of sixteen quarterings should be seen in such a low place! No; she was not seen! She was masked; but that she should even go! What a sacrifice of pride and of decency, Madame Pasteur thought it, as she saw the Baroness take the arm of one masked man after the other, and then go into the supper room with a party who followed a tall mask in a black domino.

A voice struck on Madame Pasteur's ear—was it that of Madame Neusiedler? was it—could it be?

Yes! and as she threw back mask and hood there sparkled on her neck the pearl-colored pearls and the emerald pendants of the lost jewels. O Heaven!

It nearly spoiled the plot, for Madame Neusiedler was among the friends and confederates. However, the tall Englishman stepped forward, and the two Viennese policemen arrested the woman.

She behaved with extraordinary coolness, and explained—

"It is indeed the necklace of the Baroness, given by her to my husband for moneys which he had advanced to her. Let her deny it if she dare. I have her written acknowledgment of the money, and I have come to Vienna to sell the necklace, where it is well known."

The Baroness went back to her hotel and allowed Madame Pasteur to pass a wretched night. She would explain nothing.

All Vienna was alive when the great case came on, and not a few ladies were glad to hear that the Ruckavina-Eltz jewels were in pawn—that envied necklace.

Neusiedler came to his wife's rescue, and told the story over again. The evidence against the Baroness was damning. She had, according to his story, lived far, far beyond her income, and he had supplied her with money from the Jews. She had fabricated the story of the lost necklace to try and cheat him, but here were her signatures, and here was the Baron's will, which she was about to try to disregard—his will saying that she should never marry, or, if she did, that she lost all her vast estates.

"Baroness Rukavina-Eltz, what have you to say to this? What is your defense?" said the prosecuting counsel.

"Only this!" said the Baroness, holding up in her hand the pearl colored pearls and the emerald drops, the real necklace! On the Judge's desk lay a fac simile of the famous necklace. The two ornaments looked exactly alike.

"Let an expert be brought and say which is the real necklace and which the imitation one, made in Paris, and used by me to lure this wretched and dishonest thief of a steward on to his destruction!" said the Baroness, with a flash of Roumanian fire in her eyes.

It was true! Neusiedler had been foiled; he had stolen a false necklace, which the Baroness had had made in the Rue de la Paix."

"He has been stealing from me for years; he has doubtless forged a false will of the Baron, for I have found the true one!" said Ruckavina-Eltz. "I could not unravel the net that he has thrown over me but for this happy thought of tempting him to steal some false jewels. Had he got the real ones, his story would have been plausible. Now, I trust, justice is convinced that it is a lie!"

A dreadful noise followed this speech of the spirited Baroness; Neusiedler had fallen down in a fit. Never more would he drink the yellow tinted Ruster; never more would he return to the joys of crushing the peasantry of Somlyo—of cheating the Baroness. The Baroness had cheated him at last. Sold! sold! sold! with false pearls and emeralds! Poor Jew! poor Jew!

It was a very grand wedding, that of the Baroness to Sir Lyster Howard Lyster, who though only an English country gentleman, proved to be richer than she and who made her a loving and a hunting husband.

The Emperor gave her away, and she wore the pearl colored pearls with the emerald drops, now become historical.

"Ah! Madame, dear Baroness, please tell me where you have kept the real jewels all these months?" said the pious Madame Pasteur, almost kissing the hem of her mistress' robes.

The Baroness was dressed for travelling, as her faithful adherent knelt and asked this question. She had on the quilted satin red petticoat; the scarlet of old England.

"Was it in the double locked closet of the north tower?"

"Ah, no! faithful Pasteur, then knowest Neusiedler had the key to that!"

"Was it in the jewel case of thy great acestress, the Roumanian Princess?"

"No. Guess again!"

"Was it in the convent of the nuns of Rez Gebirge?"

"No Pasteur, I never gave them anything to keep but my sins."

"Was it in the Baron's strong box in the cellar?"

"No, my dear Pasteur, no. You have the hiding place under your finger. They were quilted into the lining of this red satin petticoat. I owe the idea to that good Lady Louisa. "See here!" and gently raising the edge of her travelling skirt, right over her left foot, the Baroness showed Madame Pasteur a neat little series of pockets, where the jewels had been safely hidden in a scarlet prison.

The Weather.

The Burlington Hawkeye says that it is easy enough to predict the weather if you only follow the right rules. Here are some of them: "An intensely blue sky indicates a temporary absence of clouds. Under other circumstances, again, an intensely blue sky indicates a tornado. When the sun rises behind a bank of clouds, and the clouds hang low all around the horizon and all over the sky, and the air feels damp, and there is a fine drizzling mist blowing, the indications are there will be a rain somewhere in the United States or Canada. When it begins to thunder look out for lightning. To see the head of the family feeling in his right hand pocket, then in the left hand pocket, then in all his vest pockets, then in his hip pocket, then in his coat pockets, and then look at his ceiling, indicates "no change." If he suddenly stops whistling at the ceiling and expands his face into a broad grimace of delight, it means "unexpected change." If the corn husks are very thick, the winter will be colder than the summer. If the corn husks are very thin, the summer will be warmer than the winter. If the corn husks are neither too thin nor too thick, the summer will be warm and the winter will be cold. If the weather prophet predicts a rainy season and it happens to rain away out in Calaveras county, and is dry as a bone all over the rest of America, this rain must be set down to the credit of the weather breeder and all the dry time counts for nothing."

Chinese barbers shave without lather. This reminds us that our old schoolmaster use to lather without shaving. One is said to be as painful an operation as the other.

A Wonderful Dream.

THAT LED TO VERY SINGULAR RESULTS

On the late train from New York over the Valley road a week ago Monday night came three individuals to this city, two gentlemen and a young lady. A carriage was called and the party were driven to the residence of a well known citizen on South Franklin street. The family were all absent, but the servants were evidently apprised of their coming, for they had no difficulty in gaining entrance and subsequently in being provided for the balance of the night. The next afternoon the party left in a close covered carriage which was driven across the bridge. One of the strangers was a man of elderly appearance, the other a young gentleman, while the third was a handsome, fair-haired woman, somewhere in the neighborhood of twenty. The appearance of all favored the supposition that they were of one family come hither on a visit. The truth is sometimes stranger than fiction, and last evening a Union-Leader representative was regaled with a story concerning these people, that has not been matched for absolute interest in a good many years, and perhaps never in this section. It appears that the party were all from Boston, the city of classic culture and genuine aristocracy. The elder gentleman was the father of the young lady and the other was her family physician. About three months ago the lady was suddenly seized with spells that resembled the situation of those in a trance condition. At these times she would utter strange things, reciting verses that were evidently coined while under the influence of these spells, and would play marvellously beautiful pieces on the piano, all strange and new. These spells lasted about an hour, and came once a day. Medical advice was obtained, but the physicians could not ascertain the cause of these strange trance conditions. The lady herself could not recall anything that transpired while she was in them and was a good deal worried about what could cause them. She was healthy, unusually so, had no trace of insanity, was never injured in any way, and what caused the singular trances into which she fell daily, was a tormenting mystery.

About four weeks since the lady had a dream which so impressed her upon awakening that she informed her family about it. She said that she dreamed of going to a city called Wilkes-Barre in Pennsylvania. That she crossed a river in a covered carriage and drove to a large monument which stood a little off a main road that led by it. That upon arriving at the monument she entered the gate and walked inside. Just in front of the northern face of the tall shaft, lying in the grass, she observed a small white stone, not much bigger than a walnut, on which were seven, round, black spots, which she picked up and put in her pocket. She then went away, but before getting out of the enclosure she was met by an old woman who told her that as long as she kept the stone somewhere about her person she would never be troubled with the spells she was subject to. The family, very naturally, laughed at the vision, but the young lady did not seem to regard it in a funny light at all. On the contrary, she was deeply impressed with the dream and avoided the family during the day. That night, strange to say, the vision was repeated exactly, as it was also on the third night. By this time the members of the family grew quite serious, and regarded the young lady's dream with a good deal of awe and interest. Her spells continued coming on daily about three o'clock in the afternoon.

In the meantime the lady asserted her determination to visit this city and look at the place she had dreamed about. Her physicians were consulted, and after some days of hesitancy they finally agreed that it would do no harm to bring the lady here. It was on this occasion that she came a week ago Monday night, accompanied by her father and her physician. The wonderful part of this strange story is, that when the party who had no difficulty in locating the Wyoming monument as the object of the young lady's vision, arrived there, she was permitted to go alone inside the gate up to the tall shaft

The Clinton county democrats have nominated the following excellent ticket: Associate Judges, W. W. Rankin, Isaac Frantz; sheriff, P. B. Smith; treasurer, Wallace Gakle; district attorney, George A. Brown; commissioners, D. M. Morris, Joseph W. Hubbard; auditors, W. T. Young, L. R. Paub. L. R. McGill, esq., was re-elected county chairman.

Gen. W. H. H. Davis of the Doylestown Democrat, started on his summer vacation last week, and in a card announcing that fact, states that his assistants have given bonds not to change the politics of the paper during his absence. There is nothing like carefulness, after all, and the General's mind must now be absolutely free from anxiety.

Don Cameron may survive until the end of the present administration, for he has more methods of corrupting politics than any other prominent Republican; but, like Conkling, his days of bossism are approaching a close, and the honest people of the State will not mourn for him when he is retired to public life.—Chester County Democrat.

As might have been expected, Sitting Bull since his capture has been treated as if he were a very distinguished personage indeed. He appears to take kindly to the honors paid him, and is turning an honest penny by the sale of his autographs at $5 each. One of these fine days we look to see Mr. Bull once more on the war path, fully armed and equipped, and thirsting for the blood of the white man. This Indian business is sickening.

The American Bankers Association held a convention at Niagara Falls last week. There were 300 delegates present. A paper written by Hon. William Windom, Secretary of the Treasury, on "Government Finances" was read by E. D. Randolph of New York. An address was read by Hon. John Jay Knox, Comptroller of the Treasury, on "The Banking and Currency of the Country." Several important papers were presented by prominent bankers.

Mahone doesn't seem to be making much headway in his attempt to drag the Republican party of Virginia into the support of the Repudiation ticket. The straight-out Republicans refuse to join the Coalitionists and have nominated a ticket of their own. Out of these faction fights will come a Democratic victory. In the mean time the better class of Northern Republicans are building up a first class disgust for the whole business.

The Philadelphia Press has reached the top-notch of journalism and may fairly challenge comparison with any newspaper in the land. It is brim-full of news, ably edited, and conducted with an intelligent zeal and thoroughness, eminently creditable to its management. Politically its views are not in consonance with those of the COLUMBIAN, though we cannot but admire the quantity and quality of its news, and the energy and ability with which it discusses matters of public moment. The Press has no superior in Pennsylvania and but few equals anywhere.

Judge John J. Pearson has declined a re-nomination to the bench of Dauphin county and will return to private life at the expiration of his present term of office. He has served for thirty-three years in judicial robes and has earned an enviable reputation as a pure, able and incorruptible judge. He deserves the respect and gratitude of the people of Pennsylvania for the energy and fidelity with which he has performed his onerous duties. The Republican convention nominated John W. Simonton Esq. of Harrisburg as additional law judge as Hon. R. M. Henderson will become president judge when Judge Pearson retires.

The newspapers of Philadelphia have been waging vigorous warfare against the delinquent contractors who have failed to keep the streets in a decent condition. Filth has created disease and last week there were no less than 450 deaths in the city, of which 141 were of infants under one year of age. The Board of Health has been given authority to adopt such measures as will speedily relieve the community from the dangers that environ them, and will be urged to proceed without delay. Contractors appointed for political purposes, and not for capability and honesty, are expensive luxuries and rarely perform the duties for which they are paid. If such men are debarred from any further plundering of the treasury, this season of filth will not have been unproductive of good results.

The Montour American concedes the fact that Le Due was not a success as Commissioner of Agriculture but thinks "he certainly would not have been retained in that position one year if his management had been so absurd as to deserve the ridicule which is heaped upon him." Such innocence is so rare in these days that it is truly refreshing. Doesn't the American know that the office of Commissioner is a purely political affair and has nothing to do with agricultural matters? So far as the farmers are concerned the department might as well be abolished for all they are benefited. Le Due's preposterous and costly experiments were all duly announced in swelling phrase, and were properly condemned by press and people. Nobody expected that the Republicans would turn him out of office, but there were any amount of grounds for so doing.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

The news from Washington is far from reassuring. On Monday night the President was attacked by spells of vomiting and his pulse rose rapidly until it reached the alarming height of 150. The cause of the trouble was dyspepsia and the stomach had failed to respond to the demands made upon it. Injections of nutritious matter were administered and the President rallied somewhat. The pulse remained high and the stomach was very delicate. On Wednesday small quantities of infusion of beef were administered by the mouth and retained. At last reports there was little or no change in the condition of the sick man. The situation is critical and there seems to be but a slight chance of recovery. The wound is doing well, but the President grows weaker from lack of food and nausea. The physicians in attendance do not give up hope, and it is possible that the stomach may yet regain its tone. Fears for the worst are, however, entertained by many.

The Chicago Times throws out a hint to the effect that possibly another Ohio man in the person of Judge Thurman may be appointed to the vacancy on the supreme bench. The suggestion is ridiculous from the fact that Judge Thurman would not suit the Pacific railroad companies whose object in forcing Stanley Matthews into the supreme court was to obtain a decision from that tribunal declaring the Thurman act unconstitutional. If President Garfield should prove sufficiently liberal-minded to appoint a democrat let him name Jeremiah S. Black of Pennsylvania, the foremost jurist in the United States and a man who has shown as much personal friendship for the President as Judge Thurman or any other man. But we forget. Judge Black would not suit the Pacific railroad companies any better than the author of the Thurman act.—Patriot.

New Haven is much excited over the finding of the body of Jennie Cramer, a girl of remarkable beauty, in the waters of Long Island Sound, under circumstances leading to the belief that death was caused by violent means. She had been seen with Blanche Douglass, an abandoned woman, Walter Malley and James Malley Jr., son and nephew of a wealthy merchant of New Haven, on the night of August 3rd and the corpse was found on the 6th. The Malleys and Blanche Douglass have been arrested on suspicion of knowing something of Jennie's death. James Malley was Jennie's lover and it is suggested that to save his reputation the unfortunate girl was murdered. The exceeding beauty of the girl has aroused a very general feeling of interest and every effort has been made to unravel the mystery surrounding her death. The inquest will be very thorough and it is believed that important facts will be elicited.

A Philadelphian who signs himself "An American" contributes an article to the Press in which he endeavors to glorify Gen. Winfield Scott by blackening the character of Judge J. S. Black. If the article had appeared over the writer's own name it would have been, perhaps, entitled to more consideration. He says that "the American mind has become fairly anchored in the belief" that Judge Black, as President Buchanan's adviser, aided and abetted treason. Three things may always be assumed when a writer makes use of such a phrase as is quoted: first, that he is a hide-bound Republican, second, that the "mind" spoken of is entirely his own, and, third, that the statement is false. No person has any authority to state that the American people entertain such an opinion of Judge Black. Some there may be, like "An American," who utterly refuse to credit that eminent jurist, simply because he is a Democrat, but they do not represent "the American mind" or a fraction of it. Judge Black's reputation rests on a too solid foundation to be overthrown by the sour abuse of a Philadelphia lawyer, for such we take "An American" to be.

MAJOR S. P. HANLEY.

By the unanimous vote of the members of the late Democratic County Convention, the gentleman whose name stands at the head of this article, was chosen temporary, and afterwards, permanent chairman of the convention. The position was entirely unsought by him, and the duties of the office were performed with dignity, ability and with perfect satisfaction to all concerned. The business of the Convention was conducted with as much dispatch as our system would permit, and no one has suggested that any injustice was done, or partiality shown by the Chairman. Notwithstanding these facts, the Republican of last week says that the Convention lacked a good presiding officer, a criticism that was entirely uncalled for. It leads to the conclusion that the writer of the article does not know the difference between a good and a bad Chairman. His knowledge on the subject comes from his experience in the Republican Convention, where the qualities necessary to constitute a good presiding officer are that he shall allow himself to be easily manipulated by the two self appointed bosses of the Republican party. As Mr. Hanley was not controlled by anybody, the Republican naturally failed to discover any merit in his manner of conducting the business of the Convention.

Not satisfied with this untrue statement, the Republican attempts further to cast reflection upon Major Hanley by the following item in their local columns: "The Democratic Convention was very appropriately presided over by an ex rebel officer."

In view of the fact that the Republican party has adopted the policy of appointing rebel officers to important positions, including Longstreet, Mosby the most detestable officer in the Confederate army, Akerman and Key, both members of Republican cabinets, and many others, it would seem that consistency, if not common decency, should have prevented our cotemporary from resorting to this antiquated style of journalism to reflect upon Major Hanley and the party of which he is a member. At the outbreak of the rebellion Major Hanley was a resident of the South, and, at what he conscientiously considered his country's call, he entered the army, instead of remaining at home to mob inoffensive old men who, in the excitement of the moment were accused of being northern sympathizers. His record in this respect is far preferable to that of the men who now seek to injure him by reference to his military history. He is connected with the largest industry of Columbia county, an institution owned and controlled by some of the leading republicans of the county, but they do not seem to consider it anything out of the way to have an "ex-rebel officer" in their employ. We are happy to state that the criticisms of the Republican are looked upon with mingled indignation and contempt by Mr. Hanley's employers and his many friends through the county, regardless of party connections, and the result is that the editors of the Republican have done themselves a far greater injury than they attempted to do to the Chairman of the Democratic Convention.

GUITEAU ATTACKS A GUARD.

On Wednesday morning, Guiteau, the assassin, made a desperate attack upon one of the guards of the jail, using a knife which he had obtained in some unknown way. The knife passed through the guard's coat collar, cutting off a button and making a cut on the left shoulder. In the struggle that ensued the guard's revolver was discharged but no one was wounded. Guiteau was overpowered and disarmed. It is thought that he had heard of the President's relapse and became desperate.

The Reading News makes the statement that if the emigration from the mining regions of this state continues as it has begun, the end of the year will find the Anthracite coal mines closed for want of laborers. Did the News take into consideration the immigration of laborers during the past year. In the Wyoming coal fields at least, this has not been inconsiderable.

A despatch from Las Vegas N. M notes the massacre of twenty seven of the twenty nine inhabitants of a small Mexican village, by the Apaches. The people of New Mexico very naturally are indignant at the outrages perpetrated by the savages and demand their extermination. It is not probable that the marauders will be wiped out of existence for some time to come, if indeed that event ever takes place. As an avenger of wrongs committed by Indians this nation, big as it is, has not proved a triumphant success.

RULES FOR THE PARTY.

At the recent meeting of the Democratic State Committee in Harrisburg, Mr. W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster called attention to the lack of rules for the government of the party, the state committee and state conventions, and offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee of seven to prepare a new code. The resolution was adopted unanimously and the following committee appointed: Hon. A. H. Dill, chairman ex-officio; Hon. W. A. Wallace, Hon. S. J. Randall, W. U. Hensel, James P. Barr, Thos. J. Barger and B. Whitman. This committee will report to the state committee at a meeting to be held in Williamsport on the evening of September 27th. Mr. Hensel proposes a radical change in the management of party affairs with a view to more effective work. He thinks the chairman of the state committee should have a long term and that the secretary should be paid a salary. He favors the appointment of a small executive committee from different parts of the State to manage general campaigns.

MOLLIE MAGUIRES.

On Sunday, June 26th, Maurice Healy, foreman of Dunbar Furnace, Uniontown, was foully murdered whilst on his way home at night. He was a prominent man in the community and interested in many of the leading industries. He was utterly fearless and had gained the dislike of certain rough fellows, by discharging some of their number, and by opposing the granting of a liquor license to a disreputable fellow named McFarland. Healy had received warnings but had not heeded them. The murder was evidently committed solely from revengeful motives, and it was at once suspected that the Mollie Maguires were at their old work. Capt. R. J. Linden, Superintendent of the Philadelphia Agency of Pinkerton's Detectives, was summoned and went promptly to Uniontown. He was dressed in an unpretentious suit and assumed the name of John Sterling After mixing with the men and picking up bits of evidence here and there, Capt. Linden was convinced that the murder was the work of the Mollie Maguires and that the organization which had been suppressed in the anthracite coal fields, was in existence in this coke village. Careful investigation revealed sufficient evidence to warrant the arrest of eight men, whose names are as follows: James McFarlan, John Collins, James Rogan, Mart Donohugh, John Kane, Mike Dolan, Bernard Flood, and Pat Dolan.

The evidence against Kane, Captain Linden thinks is nearly conclusive. Such an atrocius crime merits the most severe punishment and it is to be hoped that the guilty parties may be convicted and hanged. Unless Mollie Maguireism is rooted out speedily and effectually the people of Fayette county will have as serious an affair on their hands as had the citizens of Schuylkill and Carbon counties, not many years ago.

BLACK AND BUCHANAN.

One of the most interesting contributions to the history of the country, is the report of an interview with Judge J. S Black by a correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, and published in that paper on the 7th inst. The Judge makes clear many facts connected with the latter portion of Buchanan's administration, which have been unknown or materially misunderstood. He states that the failure to reinforce Fort Sumter was caused mainly by the misrepresentations of General Scott and that to his pernicious counsels the war was attributable. Gen. Scott's overweening vanity precluded the possibility of his accepting suggestions from Judge Black or any one else, and the fort was not reinforced. Judge Black proves beyond a doubt that he was loyal to the Union, that he was opposed to the evacuation of Fort Sumter and that he did all in his power to convince the President of the soundness of his views. The statements of Judge Black are corroborated by Philip Francis Thomas, who was for a brief time Secretary of the Treasury, after Howell Cobb withdrew. Mr. Thomas says, "Of all the men in the Cabinet in those days Judge Black was the one who never lost his head. He was the one positive and conservative force in that Cabinet. He expressed his convictions clearly and forcibly, and never seemed to lose his self possession." In a Cabinet discussion upon the surrender of Fort Sumter Judge Black said, "that there never had been a period in the history of the English nation when any Minister could propose to give up to an enemy of his government, a military post, which was capable of being defended, without being brought to the block." There is no mistaking the ring of those words, and no misunderstanding their meaning. It would have been well for the country if the President had paid heed to the wise counsels of his Secretary, and been stirred to vigorous action. The interview with Judge Black, and a succeeding one with Mr. Thomas, are of the greatest value to the future historian, and the Press has done a high public service in laying them before the country. The friends of Judge Black have every reason to feel proud of the manly and patriotic stand taken by him at the the breaking out of the rebellion, and to regret that his advice was not followed by Mr. Buchanan.

There are, says the Utica Observer, people who still read and respect the Tribune. Where? What sort of people? Give the proofs.—Phila. Times.

THEIR STATEMENTS INDORSED.

A strong statement unqualifiedly indorsed must induce confidence. In this connection we note the following from Dr. Louis Rock & Son, Sheboygan, Wis.: We have been handling St. Jacobs Oil and are pleased with the large demand. Hardly a day goes by without hearing from one or another of our patrons having used it with entire satisfaction, saying it is the best thing they ever tried, and we join them in so saying.

The Atlantic flouring mill at St. Louis was struck by lightning on Friday night last, and totally destroyed An explosion instantly followed the stroke and nearly all the upper part of the mill burst open and its walls cracked from top to bottom. The bolt had scarcely touched the building when fire issued from every part, and in half an hour the mill and its contents were destroyed A number of men, working on different floors, were blown out of the doors and windows, receiving serious and perhaps fatal injuries.

Origen S. Seymour, formerly Chief Judge of the Supreme Court of Connecticut, died at his home in Litchfield, Conn., last Friday. He was born in that town in 1804. He adopted the legal profession, and also turned his attention to politics. He was elected to the State Legislature, and in 1850 was chosen Speaker of the House. In 1851 he was elected a member of Congress, and served two terms. The Democratic party in 1863 made him their candidate for Governor, but he was defeated. In 1879 he was a member of the Board of Commissioners on the boundary line between the States of New York and Connecticut. He was a Judge of the Supreme Court for eight years.

The funeral of Gen. Robert Patterson took place in Philadelphia on Thursday of last week and was attended by a large assemblage. The pall-bearers were Generals Grant, Sherman, Porter, and Hancock, Joseph Patterson, John Welsh, Judge Biddle and William H. Drayton, the Generals named representing the Loyal Legion. There were also present Generals Mott, Herring, Scoch-field, Lamotte, Hoffman, Sickles and Hartranft, ex Governor Pollock, Geo. W. Childs and William D. Kelley. STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

A Startling Revelation of Suffering!

"Oh, My God, How I Did Suffer."

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s Psoriasis, and others Leprosy, commencing on my scalp and, in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there could be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet of my bed, some half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost that could be thought of without any relief. The 12th of June I started west in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit, and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs, feet badly swollen, toe-nails came off, finger nails dead and hard as bone, hair dead, dry, and lifeless as straw. O, my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Soreka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got the resolvent Cuticura and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Resolvent three times a day, after meals, and a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura morning and evening. Result, returned to my home in less than six weeks from time I left and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper.

The recent cases of small pox have been of a mild type and this is thought to indicate the dying out of the disease. Those who were first attacked were the greatest sufferers.

Do poor farmers ever meet with fatal accidents? We ask because in the telegraphic reports of such misfortunes, the victim is invariably spoken of as a "wealthy farmer." Truly riches brig lots of trouble in this world.

The railroad men of the L. & B. road, with their wives and sweethearts had a picnic at Rupert on Saturday. A special train of five coaches conveyed the pleasure seekers from Kingston.

A new kind of potato bug has made its appearance and feeds upon the potatoes, not molesting the tops. If they are any meaner than the original bugs we're sorry to hear of their advent.

The Lycoming County Commissioners are to be brought to trial, and subscriptions are asked from the tax payers of the county to defray the necessary expenses. One of the ablest lawyers in the State has been engaged to conduct the case.

It is necessary to have a good deal of freedom in Republican conventions in this county—if it were otherwise, the managers could not appoint Bloomsburg men to represent outside town hips which send no delegates.

Charles Coleman, Elijah Hess and Milton Hess went to Elk Run Point, near the old Hess tavern, Sugarloaf township, on the 11th inst., and killed ten rattlesnakes, one of which was four feet five inches long. Three more were seen, but escaped.

Marylanders say that a watermelon should be for two days on ice before being eaten, and should then be eaten between meals. No, we have not the faintest idea why a melon should be kept so long, nor do we believe it would prove fatal if eaten at dinner, for instance.

The district attorney of Dauphin county has determined to enter suit against all the physicians in that county who have failed to register as required by law. We commend this fact to those of our physicians who have neglected to perform this duty. It is better to pay the prothonotary one dollar, than to give a justice of the peace one hundred dollars.

Samuel Miller, who was arrested and imprisoned in Williamsport several days ago, charged with causing the death of his father by poison so as to obtain the insurance on his life, has been discharged from custody. The charge could not in any way be substantiated, and the coroner's jury are censured for rendering a verdict on insufficient evidence.

A paragraph is going the rounds of the press advising parents to let their children go barefoot for a part of the day at least, during the summer months. If the suggestion is adopted there will be any number of youngsters with cut and bruised feet—and that is about all it will amount to. Health can be maintained without discarding shoes.

Stephen Butler, the oldest citizen of Wilkesbarre, died on Friday last, at the advanced age of ninety-two years. He was the son of Col. Zebulon Butler, who commanded the settlers at the massacre of Wyoming in 1778. Mr. Butler was the editor of the Wyoming Herald, the first paper established in Luzerne county, in 1818.

For the benefit of those young men who smoke cigarettes, we would mention the fact that those injurious articles are largely made of tobacco obtained from cigar stumps picked up on the streets. The New York Herald has been investigating the matter and finds strong grounds for the belief. Stick to cigars or pipes, boys, and you will have better tobacco to smoke.

Wherever black bass have been caught of late, their flesh has been found to teem with worms. These parasites are yellow and about as large as a grain of wheat. Their presence does not affect the health of the fish, which are as lively and active as ever. It is thought that the worms are of the same nature as the trichina worms found in pork. Don't eat bass till cold weather sets in.

An Iowa husband on going home found his wife carousing with four men. He adroitly got the five offenders into five different rooms, locked the doors, and then thrashed them soundly, one by one. This could happen in Sunbury any day if certain husbands had any "sand."—Northumberland Democrat.

What a shocking presentment of immorality. Can it be possible that the moral atmosphere of Sunbury is so terribly tainted.

Mr. M. F. Morse, Westboro, Mass., mentions to us the gratifying information that St. Jacob's Oil relieved him of a very severe attack of Sciatic rheumatism, and is an excellent thing.

John Allstatt speaks well of the shaving and hair cutting business in Erie, Pa. He says he is doing much better than he anticipated when moving there. John is a clever fellow and deserves success.

A new counterfeit in the shape of a quarter dollar has made its appearance in Philadelphia. The bogus piece is well executed, and excepting by experts, is somewhat difficult to detect. It would be well for our merchants and others to keep a sharp lookout for them, as they will in all probability, get into this section of the State.

Messrs. Schuyler & Holmes of this town have contracts for supplying the heating apparatus for the dwelling house and store room of A. J. Leiberg, a hardware merchant of Shenandoah, Schuylkill county, and also for the public school buildings of the same town. We are glad to know that the good workmanship of our townsmen is duly appreciated abroad.

A correspondent of the Sullivan county Democrat states that the average depth of Lewis' Lake is about thirty feet and that it covers about one hundred and twenty five acres. A writer in the Philadelphia Times asserted that the lake was 600 acres in exent and that no bottom had been found at a depth of 500 feet. The Times article was very readable but does not seem to have been conspicuously exact as to facts.

Old clocks of the kind that our ancestors used to have standing in their sitting rooms and kitchens—that tell the days of the months, the movements of the moon and heavenly bodies, and strike with a sound that reverberates through the whole house, are becoming quite fashionable. But a few years ago they used to sell at vendues at one dollar to three dollars and four dollars, but they have now gone up from twelve dollars to fifty dollars.

A strange old gentleman came near being drowned in the canal on Tuesday afternoon. Kind friends went to the rescue. Shame on the party who pushed him into the water.—Danville Record.

Well, it doesn't seem to be just the proper thing, to push elderly gentlemen in the canal just to see them drown. Queer ideas of fun they have in Danville.

Water snakes abound in Fishingcreek and are killed when found, because they are crawling and unsightly reptiles and not because they are considered dangerous. And yet it would appear that water snakes can bite. A young man who lives at Newmanville was severely bitten by one of these snakes, whilst fishing a few days ago, and the physician who was called to dress the wound, extracted a fang fully three-fourths of an inch long.

Dr. J. R. Evans has no small pox patients at present. He last attended the Zimmerman family, all of whom are now convalescent. Mr. Zimmerman had a mild form of the disease, and when he was taken his three children had not been vaccinated. The operation was performed on all of them with the following results: With two of them vaccination was successful and both had mild attacks of the disease; the other had confluent small pox and was very near to death, as vaccination failed in its case. This seems to prove the efficacy of the operation beyond a doubt.

Charles A. Ashburner, and H. M. Chance, M. D, of Philadelphia, and Professor E. M. Doolittle, of the Lehigh University, a commission appointed to make the State geological survey of the Anthracite coal fields, have arrived in Wilkes-Barre and commenced their labors. A frame building has been erected on the Court House grounds and therein will be calculated the exact latitude and longitude. It is thought that two years and a half will be required to complete the survey of the Wyoming coal fields.

Scranton commits more crime to the square foot than any other city in the State.—Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin.

Scranton is worse off than Wilkes-Barre. It not only has small pox in its suburbs, but has cholera in its metropolitan confines.—Union-Leader.

Judging from the above cheerful little notices, Scranton must be an agreeable place of residence If you escape the roughs the cholera or small pox gets you.

Mr. S. P. Hanly was unanimously chosen President of the Democratic county convention held at Bloomsburg on Tuesday. It is the first time this office has been given to any one but a resident of Bloomsburg and the choice reflected credit on the delegates assembled. Mr. Hanly is held in high esteem by all who know him and especially by the people of this place This was demonstrated by the Temperance Cornet Band, who serenaded him on Tuesday evening, after his arrival home.—Berwick Independent.

The above is correct except as to the presidency of the county conventions. Several gentlemen, not residents of Bloomsburg have been chosen to preside.

Good fresh advertisements are not the least interesting and valuable portion of a newspaper. Advertisements are news. They tell readers what they want to know; where goods can be bought, what they are sold for, who has houses to rent or sell, who wishes to purchase real estate, where employment and labor can be obtained, and a thousand other things that they want to know. It is an error to suppose that only the editors and reporters supply news worth reading. The skillful advertiser furnishes a good share of it, and if there are any readers who fail to look over the advertising columns of their paper, they miss a good deal of information that will prove valuable to them.

One of the most cheering signs of the times is the increased interest taken by the people in sanitary matters. For years past, too much indifference has prevailed and, as a consequence, there has been a great amount of sickness which could have been prevented by a reasonable attention to the laws of health. During the present Summer the streets, alleys and private grounds have been more or less thoroughly cleaned and the result cannot but prove satisfactory. Bloomsburg, in common with other towns in the State, is in better order to-day, than ever before. It is beginning to be understood that cleanliness is indispensable to health, and that no community can hope to be free from disease, where filth and dirt are allowed to accumulate. The prevalence of small pox has had something to do with the cleansing of public and private premises and, to this extent, has been a blessing in disguise.

If any of our readers intend to emigrate to Iowa, the following promissory notes in use in that State, will be found of interest. The Legal Adviser of Chicago is responsible for the form which may be considered thorough:

"Without relief from appraisement, stay or exemption laws, and in case suit is instituted for its collection, anything and every thing in my possession can be levied upon and sold including the last suit of clothes, the school books and food of my children, with the coffin or coffins any of the family may be buried in; and in case that every article is sold and there remains anything due on the note, I agree that the services of myself and family shall be sold until the demand of the note be satisfied. And I further agree that in case suit is instituted for its collection, to pay reasonable attorney fees, together with board bills, hack hire, saloon bills and other miscellaneous expenses for himself and near relatives while suit is pending. And I further agree to live on corn bread and sorghum molasses until the demands of this note are satisfied with interest at the rate of ten per cent. from date, payable annually.

Since the last issue of the COLUMBIAN several cases of small pox have been reported, but none of them of such gravity as to cause serious apprehensions. The names of the afflicted persons are as follows: Evan Jones, East Street; Joseph Hess, on Railroad Street, between Fourth and Fifth; Ida Sterner, Scott town; Mrs. Hileman, West Street, between Third and Fourth; infant of James Van-Horn, Scott town. Mr. Jones has been in the employ of the Board of Health and has necessarily been much exposed. All of the cases are of a mild type, except the infant. The babe was born about the time its father died, and may succumb to the disease owing to its extreme youth and weakness. No fears are entertained by our people, as the disease seems to be losing its virulent character and assuming a milder form. The sick are receiving excellent treatment and every means has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

DESPERATE ITALIANS.

On Monday last Joseph A. Connelly, at the instance of contractor Collins, lodged information before M. E. Walker, Esq., charging William Flynn, boss of the gang of Italians at work on the N. & W. B. R. R., with carrying concealed weapons. A warrant was issued and placed in the hands of Constable Winans, who in company with H. J. Yaple, proceeded to the place where the Italians were at work—over a mile below Coalmont. Mr. Winans succeeded in arresting his man, when some thirty of the Italians came to Flynn's relief with stones, picks and shovels, releasing him from the custody of the officer, and handling him quite roughly, while Mr Yaple barely escaped with his team from their clutches. Mr Winans returned to town and procured a warrant for twenty-six of the party, and with several policemen succeeded in making arrests early on Tuesday morning. They were brought before 'Squire Walker, and after being told the nature of the charge against them, through an interpreter, they asked not to be sent to prison but be allowed to go back to work, which was granted. Flynn and some ten others escaped and have fled the county. He is said to be a desperate character; would not work nor let the rest do so, and it was owing to his control over the men that got them into trouble. A few days since he shot twice at a colored man named Hawkes, who was passing, intending as he said, to kill him.—Mountain Echo.

A "Mutual Assessment Birth Association" has been organized at Laurelton. It provides that legitimately married members who have been connected with the company one year can have their infants (born after one year's marriage) insured. That is, they can secure from $1,000 to $3.00 when their infant is born, after one year of married life. A policy of $500 costs $4 50, and for $3000, $24. All members are taxed $4 per annum, payable semi-annually. To illustrate the operations of the company better, it may be said: A and B marry. They take out a policy for $1000 at once. They pay $0 for it, and $4 additional as yearly dues. At the end of their first year of married life they pay another instalment of $4 annual dues. Then, as soon thereafter as a child is born to them they are to receive full face value of their policy. No birth within a year after marriage is paid for. No allowance is made for twins or triplets. Each member must pay $1 assessment whenever a child is born in the class. There are no assessments the first year, but the annual dues must be paid, no matter how long the child lives. It must be born alive, however.

FISHING FOR BASS.

Now that the season for bass fishing is in its prime, the following practical hints in regard to the most successful methods of catching these gamey denizens of our rivers, will be of interest to our readers who are inclined to an appreciation of the piscatorial art, especially as the hints are derived from that well known and authentic source of information, Seth Green. For bait he advises the minnow or the sucker, chub or shiner species, fresh water crabs or crawfish, and the dobson or hellgramite. In using the minnow bait insert the hook in the middle of the back, just above the backbone, care being taken not to remove any of the scales or otherwise mar the natural appearance of the minnow. The bass seizes the minnow by darting at it and generally carries it five or six feet before it overcomes the force of the rush, when he stops until he gets the head foremost, an operation which occupies a full minute. As soon as the bass gets the minnow swallowed, or well on its way, he starts off in search of other food. The angler should not jerk his line as soon as he sees that a fish has struck his bait, but should give him line until he comes to a stop. Then make a short, quick strike, so that if you do not hook the fish the bait will not be removed from him more than a foot or so, as in case of a miss the chances are that the fish will seize the bait again. If fishing without a float and you miss striking the fish, let the bait settle to the bottom; and the fish will think he has killed the minnow, and in nine cases out of ten will go for it again. In baiting with crabs, it is a good plan to break off one of the pinchers, so that the crab is partially disabled and cannot crawl under roots or stones, and thus hide itself or get the hook fast. The black bass will seldom take the crab bait when it's off the bottom, as the fish does not seem to know what it is swimming about in the water. In fishing with crabs, it is perhaps best to do without the float, and the rod may also be dispensed with if desired. To put the crab on the hook, insert the hook on the under side through the second wrinkle of the tail from the body, allowing the hook to come out the tail on the back. Throw the bait out as far as possible and let it settle to the bottom. The bass seizes the crab as he does the minnow, but does not go so far after taking before he stops, when he turns it about until he gets it tail first. Make the strike when the bass starts to swim off. In all kinds of fishing the finer the quality of tackle used the better. Play your fish carefully and do not hurry.

The Cincinnati Gazette, good Republican, now speaks of Edwin M. Stanton in a way that in the good old days of war would have sent its editor to Fort Lafayette. "The truth is," says the Gazette, "that Mr. Stanton, who had made bluster pass for courage, and acts of gross injustice brutally persisted in for great backbone, was seriously lacking in courage, and liable to break down in great emergencies, as he did in other instances besides this. The true character of our 'great war minister,' was little known to the general public. That he was capable of doing acts of gross injustice was pretty well known, and it passed for firmness, but some letters to Buchanan, never published till after the latter died, revealed a great capacity for duplicity in his character."

The Democratic Central club of Luzerne county have adopted resolutions endorsing Joseph K. Bogert, editor of the Union-Leader, as a candidate for State Treasurer. The Williamsport Sun and Banner first advocated the claims of Mr. Bogert, on the ground that he had run well as a candidate for Register of the county.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.

There is a dangerous counterfeit in circulation, purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of the great value of "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer" is the fact that parties knowing its efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a "fac simile" of the signature of "O. H. Becker"—the manufacturer—blown in the glass; and the "Prestorer" is as clear and harmless as water, while it possesses all the component properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth, and color to the hair. Purchase only from responsible parties. Each bottle warranted. C. N. Crittenton, New York City, Wholesale Agent. oct. 29, 80-tf are undoubtedly the cheapest and most durable fence made, is not affected by fire, wind or flood, does not cause snow drifts, takes fewer posts and stock cannot push it down. Our wire is four pointed, is made of two strands of number 12 best galvanized steel wire twisted together just enough to allow for contraction and expansion in Summer and Winter, barbs are fastened every seven inches. The use of barbed wire is no longer an experiment, as last year over one hundred thousand miles were put up. We believe our wire to be the best and cheapest now manufactured because it is made of the best steel wire and runs 15 feet to the pound having the greatest strength and visibility with the least weight of any made. Put up on spools of about 100 rods weighing about 100 pounds. Price per pound 11 cents by the spool, less quantities 11½ cents per pound.

BARBED WIRE

Causes of Roup in Fowls.

In the treatment of fowls one disease must not be mistaken for another. For instance the name of "chicken cholera" is applied quite frequently to many ailments that are simple, or merely disarrangements of the internal organs that may be easily remedied by diet or place. Roup is the worst affliction of the poultry yard. It may be pronounced the root of all diseases. It proceeds from the simplest causes, as a sudden cold contracted from a current of air or undue exposure. At one time the writer sold a cock for breeding purposes in April. He was a fine bird, and had been kept under cover with a southern glass exposure, and was not accustomed to the outside atmosphere. The consequence was a sudden cold, proceeding from the change and neglect received. A few days later a note was received from the customer, conveying the information of the fowl's illness, further remarking that he was unfit for use, as he was diseased. All animals suffer greatly from change of home, not only from the difference of treatment and feed as well as quarters, but also from home sickness. Fowls suffer from the same cause. But this was a case of downright cruelty. The fowl had not been hardened.

When shipping fowls, or selling them, without having been seen by the purchaser, every prticular concerning the treatment known to the seller of the birds, should previously be forwarded, so that accidents and sickness may be avoided. This is only just and honorable, more especially in the spring of the year before the fowls are accustomed to the outside atmosphere. When purchasers see the fowls this is unnecessary, as they are able to take notes when visiting the premises, and act accordingly. No censure, when such is the case, can be attached to the seller, in case of failure in the purchaser. Fowls also suffer greatly from transportation. The fatigue of the journey, unnatural position and irregularity of feeding, largely serve to disturb the equilibrium, and they fall a ready prey to colds which if neglected, run into roup, which in the advanced state is incurable. It assumes many forms, and is oftentimes, no doubt, termed cholera. It should be avoided as the worst distemper that afflicts our domestic birds. It may be advancing by slow stages and unobserved, until the victim is much reduced. At other times it puts on a more acute, but not so dangerous appearance. On the arrival of fowls from long distances, care should be exercised in the first feeding. It is naturally supposed that fowls are fatigued and hungry and will greedily devour what is set before them. They should have soft, scalded, and easily digested food, and be placed at once in warm, comfortable quarters. If this precaution was always taken there would be less cause for complaint and less censure of the seller. Bad food will also produce what is termed chicken cholera.

The poultry business is a great and still increasing one. A country place is not stocked without them and to keep them in health and profit is no small undertaking. It will not do to allow them to shift for themselves altogether. The garden and fruit as well as flower beds, will suffer, hence they must be controlled in their movements. Constant close confinement will not answer. Still fowls will thrive and be profitable if confined during the larger half of the day, but they must be supplied with all the requirements of nature, and fresh clean water must be given. Fowls often get run down, and require a change of food; especially laying hens, which are large consumers. Giving the best care daily will keep them from eating feathers, and promote health and activity. If the weather be cool, a little pepper may be given, but do not give too much to hens that are laying eggs for hatching. In that case they are apt to be unfertil ized. Before doctoring ailing fowls be certain of the difficulty, as harm is done by administering doses for a disease that may not exist at the time.—Country Gentleman.

GOOD FARMING.—It is one sign of a good farmer if he prizes manure. It does not require a good farmer to raise bountiful crops on a farm already rich, but the art lies in so managing the farm that it will produce good crops every year without losing in fertility. A man may make money from his farm, and be wasteful of fertilizers, but he is not a good farmer, for he is constantly running his land into debt which it will require years of good tillage to overcome. Good farming consists of such management as will make the farm produce the best possible results without deteriorating the soil. This can only be accomplished by a rigid economy in the making and use of manure, and a systematic rotation of crops that will be the least exhaustive to the soil. It is not always the best farmer who grows the most produce from his acres any more than it is the most successful merchant who sells the most goods. A farm may yield abundantly of exhaustive crops for a few years and return to the owner a handsome income, but there must be a reaction sooner or later, for soil cannot produce crops without food any more than a cow can give milk without feed and drink. We must live according to our means and practice the same rule in our farming

BROKEN LIMBS.—A practical stock grower advises his brother farmers not to be in a hurry to destroy any animal that may break a leg, for by means of plaster of Paris (not land plaster) and some bagging strips, the limb may be set and supported until the fractured bone unites again. His plan has been, both with calves and sheep, to wind the strips of bagging about the broken limb, plaster over with calcined plaster mixed to a thin paste, wind another over that and apply more plaster, the leg being fastened to splints of wood until the plaster sets. The animal will limp around for a few days on three legs, but recovers without blemish.

A minister was soliciting aid to foreign missions, and applied to a gentleman who refused him with the reply, "I don't believe in foreign missions. I want what I give to benefit my neighbors."

"Well," replied he, "whom do you regard as your neighbors?"

"Why, those around me."

"Do you mean those whose land joins yours?" inquired the minister.

"Yes."

"Well," said the minister, "how much land do you own?"

"Five hundred acres."

"How far down do you own?"

"Why I never thought of it before, but I suppose I own about half way through."

"Exactly" said the clergyman; "I suppose you do, and I want this money for the New Zealanders—the men whose land joins yours on the bottom."

TRUTH AND HONOR.

Query:—What is the best family medicine in the world to regulate the bowels, purify the blood, remove costiveness and biliousness, aid digestion and tone up the whole system? Truth and honor compels us to answer, Hop Bitters; being pure, perfect and harmless. See another column.—Toledo Blade.

The Blackest of Villains.

NEARLY A HUNDRED YEARS OLD AND EIGHTY TIMES A MURDERER.

Vasily Tchoomak, aged ninety six years has just died in the hospital of the Odessa Prison with the reputation of having in the course of his vile existence committed alone, or in conjunction with others, eigthy murders, and also of having escaped no fewer than five times from Siberia. He was born near Ismail about the year 1785, and appears to have been of Kalmuck descent, of herculean proportions and of great physical strength. After serving his term as a soldier, he adopted brigandage as his profession, and with a band of three or four score roughs, kept the wooded part of Bessarabia and even the country for many miles round Odessa during several years in such a state of terror, that the police rather than arrest him lived on friendly terms with him. At last about the year 1850, a police superintendent named Khorzhevsky undertook to capture him, and surrounding a low roadside inn kept by one Keesceloff and known to be the resort of thieves and robbers, succeeded in doing so after a desperate encounter, in which fifteen men altogether on both sides were killed or wounded. For this service Khorzhevsky received the order of St. Vladimir, a distinction not so often bestowed in those days as in these. The old Russian criminal code being then in existence, Tchoomak remained in prison nine years before being brought to trial. In 1859, however, he was condemned to twenty years hard labor in Siberia and to be flogged. Five years later he escaped back to Odessa, but was again caught, tried and sent into captivity. In 1869 he again found his way back to Odessa, was again caught, and after being kept in prison till 1871, was retired and sent back to Siberia, but the very same year he managed to get away from there while being transferred from Irkutsk to Kercusk, and in 1874 was recaptured at Flizavetgrad, in this government (Kherson), and for the fourth time tried and removed to Siberia. A couple of weeks ago he appeared here again, thus making the fifth escape from Siberia, and being caught in an attempt to steal a wagon and a pair of horses in one of the German colonies in this neighborhood, the sturdy colonists, following their usual practice of taking the law into their own hands in such cases after belaboring him and a companion of his, bound their arms and legs with cords, brought them to Odessa and handed them over to the prison authorities. The two criminal had been so roughly handled, however, as to necessitate their removal to the prison infirmary, where Tchoomak died two days after, seven of his ribs having been broken. It is proposed to send his brain to Dr. Benedekt of Vienna, for examination, that gentleman being reputed to have devoted much attention to the brains of notorious criminals.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM SOLVED.

Ambition, competition and over-exertion use up the vital powers of men and women, so that a desire for stimulants seems to be a natural human passion, and drunkenness prevails on account of this necessity for bodily and mental invigoration. Parker's Ginger Tonic fairly solves the difficult problem, and has brought health and happiness into many desolate homes. It does not tear down an already debilitated system, but builds it up without intoxicating.—Enquirer See other column.
